POPULAR OFFICER TAKEN BY DEATH

When the sad information that Peace Officer G. W. Hopman, familiarly known as Bill Hopman, had passed away on Wednesday morning, at the hospital, reached this city, the whole community was shocked and involuntarily thought, "Death cometh in the midst of life."

Everybody knew "Bill," and respected him for his conscientious performance of his duty. Although he was of large and powerful frame, still he was ever gentle and polite, as he responded to the demands of his official position. At all times he was justly serious, comprehending that he was the protector of the people and that the good name of the municipality, in a measure, depended upon him. In respect to his memory the public flags waved at half-mast and a general feeling that a faithful friend had been called prevailed.

He was born in New York, September 27, 1877, and spent his childhood and received his education in Rutherford, Napa county. His parents and family were prominently identified with the wine business of Napa valley. For fourteen years he was the superintendent of the French-American Wine Co., at Healdsburg, Sonoma county.

For several years, after becoming a resident of this city, he found employment in the lumber and fuel business of H. H. Smith, and for the last five years he served as a member of the Daly City police department.

On Wednesday, a week previous to his death, he became sick, and went to St. Luke's hospital, where after observation it appeared that an operation for appendicitis was necessary. This was performed last Friday and the patient, for a time, seemed to be relieved.

But, in spite of good doctors and excellent care, a failing followed and the end came at 7:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

The deceased leaves to mourn him his wife, Anna Hopman, and two sons, Theodore and George Jr., his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. Hopman, brothers, R. C. Hopman and Harry Hopman, sisters, Dahlia Hopman and Mrs. Louise Kuebler, all of St. Helena, and Mrs. Annie D. Smith, wife of Mayor H. H. Smith of this city.

Also numerous friends will long recall him as a fine example of a good citizen. He was a member of the Colma-Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles and of the Foresters at Healdsburg.

His funeral will take place from the Lasswell parlors at 2:30 p. m. this Friday, and the ceremonies will be under the direction of the Eagles. He will be interred at Olivet Memorial Park.

The sympathy of all who knew him is extended to his bereaved relatives.

ENTERTAINS YOUNG FOLKS IN CELEBRATION OF BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. John Viotti, of Templeton avenue, entertained a large group of young folks at their pretty home last Saturday evening in honor of their son Elmo, who celebrated his eighteenth birthday.

Mrs. Viotti was assisted in entertaining her guests by Mrs. E. De Martini and Mrs. Menconi. The evening was spent in dancing in the spacious social hall that occupies the lower floor, which was tastefully decorated in small electric lights of many colors. Darrell De Martini furnished the music for dancing on his accordion. Elmo was the recipient of many gifts from his friends.

A midnight supper was served to the following guests: Misses Eva Menconi, Mary Santich, Bessie Duthrow, Dot Schudel, Margerita Rubio, Flossy Garcia, Elettia Williams, Alice O'Farrell, Evelyn Hansen, Grace Miller, Josephine Millen, Florence Abagnale, Clare Abagnale, Esther Vireno, Mable Vireno, Thomassine MacNally, Edythe Bottine, Virgie Varni, Babe Rossi; Messrs. John Zamb, Girard Rose, George Fuerst, Red O'Connell, Donald Anderson, Muz Muzzolino, Herman Brede, Henry Jebe, Andy Vireno, Darrell De Martini, Raynold Viotti, Alphonse Bonacorsi, Angelo Zolezzi, Frank Greffatto and Elmo Viotti.

2,319 WOMEN WORLD WAR VETS RECEIVE COMPENSATION

State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the California Department of the American Legion has compiled an interesting set of figures showing that 2,319 women are receiving compensation from the Federal Government for World War incurred disabilities. The total monthly payments, according to Fisk, amount to $124,229. These women served in the Army Nurse Corps, in the Navy Department and in the Marine Corps during the war. Nearly 40,000 women had military status during the World War.

NEW SKYLINE LINK OPENED TO PUBLIC

Peninsula motorists were given a new route to Santa Cruz and Monterey with the opening last Sunday of a new 12-mile unit of the Skyline boulevard from the La Honda road to Saratoga gap.

A heretofore isolated portion of the redwoods of San Mateo county was opened by the new unit, a wide oiled boulevard with winding curves and easy grades.

It will link the Skyline boulevard with the route into Big Basin and the San Lorenzo creek road to Boulder creek, the Big Trees, Santa Cruz and points on Monterey bay. It lies west of the San Morena summit and provides glimpses of redwoods in the depths of Alpine canyon and the steep slopes down to the Pacific ocean.

The motorist bound for Santa Cruz follows the Big Basin road from the junction at Saratoga gap to the oiled road that leads down San Lorenzo creek to Boulder creek, whence pavement leads to the seashore. The total distance by this route from Fleishacker pool, San Francisco, to Santa Cruz, is 75.6 miles.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. ENROLLS NEW MEMBERS

The General Pershing P. T. A. held their regular meeting last Tuesday at the school house on Hanover street, President Mrs. L. T. Fletcher presiding. There was a good attendance of officers and members. Several new members were enrolled.

Mrs. Watson, of Evergreen avenue, was appointed chairlady of pens, magazines, etc.

Arrangements were made for a bazaar to be held on Friday, November 22. This will be a splendid opportunity to purchase gifts for Christmas. Make a note of the date on your calendar. Fuller particulars of this bazaar will be published later.

It was decided to accept the offer of the Hostess Cake Co., to supply refreshments, and for one of their representatives to give a lecture at the regular meeting to be held the first Tuesday of December.

Mrs. Carson, chairlady of the program committee, has made arrangements for the school board members to meet with the P. T. A., and others who are interested, on the evening of October 31, for the purpose of explaining what is done with the tax money. After this meeting is adjourned there will be a Halloween party for the children and others, refreshments will be served and there will be lots of fun.

Mrs. Fletcher reported that a shack which was a danger and a menace to the children of the neighborhood had been removed at the instigation of the P. T. A. Also that a child found to be seriously ill had received medical aid and was removed to a hospital.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. E. Hassett, the principal of the school, for the wonderful improvements she has caused to be made in the front of the school by having the lawn seeded and planted.

The luncheon which the executive board gave the teachers was much enjoyed by all present and afforded the opportunity for some of the mothers to become better acquainted with the teachers.

The next regular meeting will be held the first Tuesday of November.

BUILDING PERMITS INDICATE STEADY GROWTH OF CITY

That this city is enjoying a steady growth is indicated by the issuance of the following building permits during the month of September:

M. F. Brass, 663 Crocker avenue, five rooms; 651 Crocker avenue, five rooms.

Males, 77 Parkview avenue, garage. Conroy Horn, 221 Peoria street, five rooms.

V. Bjorkman, 546 Hanover street, five rooms; 539 Hanover street, five rooms.

M. F. Brass, 320 Parkview avenue, five rooms. John Nordquist, 898 Bellevue avenue, four rooms.

T. A. Pilgrim, 107 Hillcrest Drive, garage.

A. J. Dalton, 92 Hillcrest Drive, five rooms.

L. J. Roberts, 562 Crocker avenue, three room addition.

M. Tosch, 162 Evergreen avenue, five rooms.

YOUNG PEOPLE ARE ACTIVE AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The young people of Grace Presbyterian church are providing the music at the service of the church, and Elettia Williams will have charge of this activity for Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The Communion will be observed at this time and the pastor will preach on "The Historic Meaning of the Communion." The church is located at Hanover and Evergreen.

JEFFERSON PLAYS TIE WITH BALBOA

Outplaying their opponents in every department, but unable to score more than one touchdown on account of numerous penalties, Jefferson's football eleven played a 7 to 7 tie last Friday on the Indians' field in their annual gridiron clash with Balboa.

Jefferson tallied its points in the second quarter, when a 13 yard pass, Gibbons to SoRelle, was completed near the side-line on Balboa's 40 yard stripe, and LeRoy ran the remaining distance through a broken field to score. Belli converted on a weakside play.

The Indians were visited by their third period jinx again in this game. Augustien, Balboa's speedy halfback, intercepted a pass on his own 20 yard marker, and raced 80 yards to a touchdown. Gorrebeck, fullback, tied the score by bucking the ball over for the extra point.

Belli, substitute halfback, was the outstanding offensive star for Jefferson. He averaged 6 yards every time he carried the ball, and gained a total of 91 yards. The Indians' team advanced the pigskin 250 yards from the line of scrimmage, against 111 yards for the visitors.

One of the features of the contest was the high class punting of J. Gibbons, Jefferson's captain. Jack averaged 33 yards in eight attempts, his longest boot traveling 62 yards from the line of scrimmage.

The only advantage that Balboa was able to show over Jefferson was the safety man position. In this department Hunter, quarterback, easily outclassed Meadows and Belli.

Jefferson was set back 10 yards on five occasions and received the minimum penalty twice to bring their total up to 85 strides. Balboa had their play called back four times to be penalized 30 yards during the entire game.

The Indians made 11 first downs, and the visitors succeeded on having the yardsticks moved five times.

The officials were: Referee, Elder; Field Judge, Glasson; Head Linesman, Hackley.

YOUNG PEOPLE ARE INVITED TO COME TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Next Sunday will be the first in a city and bay region wide Church Loyalty Crusade by all Protestant churches reaching out as far as Monterey and Tracy.

Young People are urged to come to the Young Peoples' meetings. However this is a whole church movement. Come to all services and you will be warmly welcomed.

This Sunday evening's meeting will feature three vocal numbers, a solo and a duet, a violin solo and chorus singing. Aside from this there will be five short, snappy talks, devotional and a recitation.

Ten thousand young people have found the church worthy of their support and faithfulness in San Francisco alone. Come! This Sunday evening at 6:45, to 5724 Mission street. I. L. S.

VETERANS TO PARTICIPATE IN AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

Participation of the three hundred and sixty odd Posts of the American Legion in California in the annual observances of American Education Week, November 11-17, has been announced by State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid of the state department of the World War veterans' organization. Representatives of the American Legion Posts will join local civic organizations in the American Education Week programs arranged for the schools and for community meetings.

DARCY'S DEFEAT MERCHANT TEAM

After three attempts, Darcy's Sport Shop nine finally succeeded in defeating the Daly City Merchants' baseball team. The San Mateoans won by a score of 7 to 5, last Sunday, on their home diamond.

Anglo, Darcy's starting pitcher, was disposed of in two and two-thirds innings. The Merchants scored five runs during this time and collected seven hits.

A. Chanty replaced Anglo in the third and pitched almost perfect ball, allowing only two hits.

Dick Randall, the Merchants' slaban, allowed ten hits, walked three batters and whiffed eleven would-be hitters.

Two boys from Daly City, Strand and Rettig, garnered home runs. Both of these circuit clouts came in the hectic third inning that completely routed the Darcy's pitcher. From then on the Merchants played a losing battle.

Almost all the Merchants' players turned in a ragged game. If any of their members turned in a fair game in the field, they were usually weak at bat. The only exception to the above statement was Sloan, first baseman. He collected three hits out of four trips to the plate and was not charged with an error.

B. Pease, Darcy's Sport Shop, was a tower of strength to the winners on the field. He made no less than six assists, every one of which would have been turned into a hit had he not made a sparkling play to retire the man at first.

The five runs that the Merchants collected in the early part of the game kept them in the lead until the sixth frame. In this inning Darcy's unleashed a four run rally that put across the two run margin that won the game.

SAN FRANCISCO MAY ACQUIRE TITLE TO AIRPORT

San Francisco's intention of acquiring Mills field by condemnation proceedings if necessary was again indicated last Monday when the board of supervisors gave final passage to an ordinance providing $62,500 for field improvements.

Milo F. Kent, chairman of the airport committee, and Frank Havenner, chairman of the finance committee, announced that they proposed to hold a meeting soon to formulate a declaration of policy. Following this will come submission of a bond issue for purchase of the field at a price estimated at $250,000.

Supervisor Jesse Colman registered the only vote against the appropriation. The funds are to be used for purchase of new landing lights, paving runways from the hangers to the field, and improvement of the drainage system.

MANY ROADS BUILT WITH FEDERAL AID

A total of 78,523.3 miles of Federal aid road construction had been completed in the United States and the Territory of Hawaii on July 31, according to a report recently issued by the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture.

On July 31, according to this report, a total of 9,926.1 miles of Federal-aid roads was under construction at a total estimated cost of $248,071,331.25, and with a Federal-aid allotment of $100,230,149.01.

Of the balance of Federal aid funds available for new projects, the largest amount, $3,698,852.90, was according to the Bureau's figures, available to New York; second, $2,606,225, Illinois; while the smallest amount, $16,793.31, was available to Delaware; next, $21,069.26, Iowa; and next, $45,203.86, Nevada.

BARS BILLBOARDS ON SIDE ROADS

Sixteen of San Francisco's scenic drives and boulevards are protected from the billboard menace by an ordinance of San Francisco supervisors given unanimous vote last Monday. It was introduced by Supervisor Alfred Roncovieri.

The ordinance bars billboards from Twin Peaks boulevard, Roosevelt way, El Camino del Mar, Marina, Sunset and Harding boulevards, Portola drive, Skyline boulevard, the Great highway, Esplanade, the Nineteenth avenue extension, Bayshore highway, Sloat boulevard, Junipero Serra, Alemany boulevard and the east side of the Market street extension.

FROM FRIEND TO FRIEND

These beautiful poems were given to me by a very dear friend, who suffers much and says little about it. Her illness has been of long duration, yet to talk with her just a little while you will realize what fine folks there are around us, and what a beautiful world this is. She can see a reason or have at least an excuse for people who are thoughtless, selfish or mean. She will tell you that very few plan to do wrong. It's just their way of viewing things from perhaps, who knows, the way they have been treated. It is our wish that she will be better soon. Those who visit her home always leave it with a bigger sense of appreciation of life and what it holds.

Where is the man, woman or child who does not love a poem that expresses what they feel, and yet are unable to write it. I hope those who read these verses will enjoy them as much as I did when I received them. I have taken this method of sending out to other folks the message they give from the one whose way of living is reflected in these beautiful lines.

LILLIAN G. LANDINI.

WHERE IS HEAVEN

Why look for heaven when heaven is here

In every lover's radiant face,
In every maiden's winsome grace;
In every baby's smile or tear
That calls a tender mother near;
In every heart that kindness knows,
In every gift a friend bestows,
In every man in whom you find
A loving heart, an honest mind;
In every field or woodland bower
Where trills a song or dwells a flower
Why look for heaven when heaven is here.

—Kansas City Journal.

I KNOW SOMETHING GOOD ABOUT YOU

Wouldn't this old world be better
If the folks we meet would say:
"I know something good about you!"
And then treat you just that way?

Wouldn't it be fine and dandy,
If each handclasp warm and true
Carried with it this assurance,
"I know something good about you!"

Wouldn't life be lots more happy,
If the good that's in us all
Were the only thing about us
That folks bothered to recall?

Wouldn't life be lots more happy
If we praised the good we see?
For there's such a lot of goodness
In the worst of you and me.

Wouldn't it be nice to practice
That fine way of thinking, too?
You know something good about me!
I know something good about you!

Establishment of a dirigible base on land near Redwood City owned by the city of San Francisco was taken under advisement last Friday by the San Francisco supervisors airport committee following a report of the airport and public welfare committee that the cost will be $4,500,000. Study of the project with a view to locating the base at Redwood City was ordered.

GAGSTER'S VICTIM SLAIN ON HIGHWAY

Evidently the victim of gangsters, Paul Slikton, aged 35, a Russian, living at the Perry apartments on Huntington avenue, San Bruno, was found late Monday night dead on the highway just north of San Bruno.

It was at first believed that Slikton was struck by a hit-runner but an autopsy performed last Tuesday morning revealed a fractured jaw and smashed face as the only injury. There were no marks on the body to indicate that the man might have been hit by an automobile. It is believed by authorities that the man had been struck a terrific blow in the side of the face, the shock of which caused a brain injury causing death.

Slikton was identified by a letter addressed to him by Harry Flint of Vallejo, with whom police are endeavoring to communicate. It is believed Flint may be able to throw some light on the associates of Slikton.

The dead man was employed at the De Fillipo mushroom plant at San Bruno. He was a veteran of the World War.

Sheriff J. J. McGrath and Deputy Sheriff Laurence Nieri are investigating the affair.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

The first unit of the $400,000 Marchetti motor plant at South San Francisco will be formally opened next Sunday, October 6, with a program in which South San Francisco officials and members of the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce will take part.

The entire estate of the late Giuseppe Gaggero, Colma rancher and pioneer, valued at over $40,000, is left to the widow, Mrs. Adelfina Gaggero, according to the terms of the will, filed for probate last Saturday. Gaggero died August 22.

Miss Josephine Callaghan, armless California aviatrix and horsewoman, who attracted wide attention on the Peninsula for her riding at the recent Palo Alto horse show, lost her life last Friday when her airplane plunged into a field at Abilene, Texas.

Plans of the telephone company to eliminate the prefix "Burlingame" from telephones in the city of Burlingame and to give them all the prefix "San Mateo" were strongly protested in resolutions adopted by the board of directors of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce.

Antone Tenet died last Monday night at San Mateo. The deceased was among the pioneers of the Half Moon Bay district, where he engaged in ranching for 35 years. He had been a resident of San Mateo for the past 15 years.

Perhaps a storm between now and the first of November and then Indian summer. This is the prediction of Father Jerome Ricard, of Santa Clara University, padre of the rains, and Father James B. Henry, who has been helping Father Ricard since the latter's illness. The prediction is for clear and cool weather through October.

Plans for celebration of National Fire Prevention Week beginning next Sunday, are being completed by fire departments in San Mateo and Burlingame.

Yosemite national park closes 1929 season with an estimated gain of 1,000 visitors over last season. This will again place Yosemite in the lead of all national parks.

John Whitfield, San Mateo blacksmith, and D. S. Hagerty, San Francisco, were killed Saturday night in San Francisco when their automobile, with the San Mateo man at the wheel, crashed head-on into a street car.

Lumbering is again actively under way in Tulare county mountain mills, the first time in a decade that operations have been undertaken on more than a meager scale. Three mills are now operating, each planning runs of considerable duration.

Bartholomeo Ottonello, aged, 44 Pedro Valley rancher, died Monday in Pedro valley, following a brief illness. He was a native of Italy, cousin of Peter Pastorino, also of Pedro Valley. Funeral services were held Wednesday with a requiem high mass at St. Peter and Paul church, San Francisco, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. Interment was in the Italian cemetery, Lawndale.

SUMMONS

No. 16094.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo, and the complaint filed in the office of the County Clerk of said County.

In the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of San Mateo.

ANGELO ARMANINO, Plaintiff, vs. HENRY E. LESZKOZYNSKY, and also all other persons unknown claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's ownership or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto, Defendant.

The People of the State of California Send Greeting to: Henry E. ## SIDELIGHTS

The worst is yet to come. A fashion authority declares that the latest trousers for fall and winter wear "will balloon from the hips to the ankles, where they will be tight fitting."

To the list of versatile young ladies add Miss Varney Cashmore, of Banbury, England. Although she dispenses whiskey and beer on week days as barmaid at Marlborough Arms, she filled the pulpit at the Unitarian church on Sundays this summer during the pastor's vacation.

If anything be worse than "a bull in a china shop," it is a motorcycle. Peter Calandar rode his gasoline propelled steed into a Brooklyn crockery store, smashing $2,000 worth of merchandise, but was not hurt in the crash.

Some say animals do not reason, but be that as it may, they sometimes do something just as effective. When two playful mules threatened to trample 2-year-old Holland Wilder, of Pontotoc, Michigan, an old family horse picked the child up by the seat of the trousers and held him out of harm's way until his father came to the rescue.

A Georgia mountaineer recently sought a contract to furnish the government with some good corn liquor. He had heard that Uncle Sam needed a supply of medicinal whiskey, but he hadn't heard of the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act.

An unpleasant official task fell to the lot of Police Chief Joseph Herden, of Fairhaven, N. J., a few nights ago. Called to arrest someone who was pouncing on Mrs. Pearl Mack's back door and using loud and threatening language, he found the offender to be Mrs. Herden, his wife. But he did his duty.

Men and tigers played a desperate game to a close score last year in India. Hunters accounted for 1,068 tigers, while tigers killed 1,033 humans, according to the best figures available.

George J. McLaughlin has been married for several days, but hasn't had an opportunity to kiss his bride yet. The young lady, Miss Sarah Fort Montgomery, went through the ceremony in Miami with a proxy for the groom, who is in Brazil.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

WHEREAS, WALTER C. OLSON and CLARICE OLSON, his wife, both of the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, did, on the 15th day of October, 1926, make, execute and deliver their certain deed of trust, and the 15th day of October, 1926, to Anglo-California Trust Company, a corporation, as trustee for the benefit of A. L. Lundy, as beneficiary, which said deed of trust was recorded on the 18th day of October, 1926, in the office of the County Recorder of the County of San Mateo, State of California, in Volume 239 of Official Records at page 375, and which said deed of trust was given to secure the faithful performance of all obligations contained in said deed of trust and to secure the payment of a certain promissory note of said grantors, payable to said beneficiary, in the principal sum of Four Thousand Dollars ($4,000.00), and for that purpose conveyed to the said trustee the following described real property, situate in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows:

Lot No. 45 in Block lettered "D" as shown on that certain map entitled "Map of the Mission Street Land Co. and John Henderson, as trustees, for the benefit of HOME MUTUAL DEPOSIT-LOAN COMPANY, a corporation, as beneficiary, dated January 15, 1925, and recorded in the County Recorder of San Mateo County July 31, 1925, in Book "E" of Original Maps at page 73 and copied into Book 2 of Maps at page 51.

WHEREAS, the said A. L. Lundy duly endorsed the note hereinabove referred to, dated the 15th day of October, 1926, to Anglo-California Securities Co., a corporation, which note was executed by Walter C. Olson and Clarice Olson, his wife, in the sum of Four Thousand Dollars ($4,000.00); and

WHEREAS, the said grantors have made default in the payment of said promissory note and in the payment of certain indebtedness secured by said deed of trust, and have defaulted under the terms of said deed of trust and said promissory note; and

WHEREAS, the said A. L. Lundy duly endorsed the note hereinabove referred to, dated the 15th day of October, 1926, to Anglo-California Securities Co., a corporation, as beneficiary by reason of the endorsement and transfer as hereinbefore set forth, did heretofore and pursuant to statute in such case made and provided, on the 11th day of June, 1929, record in the office of the County Recorder of San Mateo County, State of California, in Vol. 416 of Official Records, page 389, their notice and default, and breach of said grantors under the terms of said deed of trust and notice of their election to sell, or cause to be sold, the said real property, reference to which said notice and the record thereof is hereby made; and

WHEREAS, the said beneficiary has requested and authorized the undersigned trustee to sell the property described in said deed of trust and hereinabove described for the purpose of satisfying the said indebtedness of said Walter C. Olson and Clarice Olson, his wife;

NOW, THEREFORE, pursuant to said notice and demand, and in accordance with the terms and under the authority of said deed of trust, the undersigned trustee hereby gives notice that default has been made in the payment of the principal and interest of said note and in the payment of the indebtedness secured by said deed of trust, and that three (3) months have elapsed since the said recording of said notice, and that on Monday, the 14th day of October, 1929, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A. M. of said day, at the front entrance to the City Hall, at No. 51 Wellington Street, in the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, State of California, said trustee will sell, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, the hereinabove described property, or such portion thereof as it may in its discretion deem necessary to sell in order to accomplish the objects of the trust in said deed of trust provided.

All bids and payments shall be made in gold coin of the United States of America at the time of said sale.

The beneficiary under said deed of trust or any other person may purchase at said sale.

WITH OUR WOMEN

Misses Violet, Lily and May Austin, sisters, whose ages range from 16 to 20, perform all the manual labor incident to the operation of a 100-acre farm and a dairy with 40 cows near Turlock, Calif.

Mrs. Fannie Steinberg, of East Orange, N. J., inherited two million dollars from an aunt in Buenos Aires, but continues to assist her husband in conducting his small fur store.

Rev. Mrs. Hilda Ives, of Presumpscot, Me., recently performed the marriage ceremony in which her daughter, Elizabeth, became the bride of Alger B. Chapman, of New York.

Miss Mary Fallon, a paralytic patient in a New York hospital for 15 years, does exquisite work in painting designs on scarfs, handkerchiefs and the like, holding her brush in her teeth.

Mrs. Michael Fitzhenry, of East Dedham, Eng., has reared 13 children and has nine grandchildren, although she is only 40 years of age.

Miss Lucy Hennon, of Lima, O., is the only woman to manage an important farmers' cooperative association. She was called in consultation regarding agricultural problems recently by the Federal Farm Board.

Miss Corry Liebbrand, 21-year-old Dutch girl, swam 37 miles from Lausanne to Geneva, Switzerland, the only person ever known to accomplish the feat. Last year Georges Michel attempted but failed, although he had swum the English Channel.

Mrs. Ella Herbert, 84, recently took her first airplane ride at Montgomery, Ala., with General Paul Sanguinetti, 83, a Confederate veteran, as a fellow passenger.

You can always give richer, deeper, more brilliant colors to faded or out-of-style dresses, hose, coats, draperies, etc., with Diamond Dyes.

And the colors stay in through wear and washing!

Here's the reason. Diamond Dyes contain the highest quality anilines money can buy. And it's the anilines that count! They are the very life of dyes.

Plenty of pure anilines make Diamond Dyes easy to use. They go on evenly without spotting or streaking. Try them next time and see why authorities recommend them; why millions of women will use no other dyes.

You get Diamond Dyes for the same price as ordinary dyes; 15c, at any drug store.

CALIFORNIA
NEWS BRIEFS

Residents of the Los Osos valley had voted down a proposed $144,000 bond issue for building a road through the valley.

William H. Weeks has been chosen by the Martinez school board to design plans and specifications for the new $240,000 junior high school for which a bond election is to be called.

City Engineer T. D. Kilkenny filed his approval report with the Vallejo city council in regard to the plans and specifications for the new $100,000 Veterans' Memorial Hall.

The Vallejo airport, three miles north of Vallejo, is to be improved this fall. The runway will be graded and the tall eucalyptus trees at the eastern approach topped.

San Jose's schools have an enrollment of 543 more students than opening day last year, according to City Superintendent of Schools Walter Bachrodt.

Consolidation of the fire districts inside and outside the town of Concord is under consideration by the town council. The council committee which is investigating the problem is composed of A. W. Martin, Joseph De Rosa and William Eddy.

Reports were received at San Rafael that mountain lions have been seen roaming over various parts of Marin county. Captain W. B. Sellmer of the California Fish and Game commission announced bounties will be paid hunters who kill mountain lions.

Steps to forward the movement for the elimination of grade crossings of the Southern Pacific lines between San Francisco and San Jose will be taken at Palo Alto at a conference on October 15. The call for the meeting was issued by Mayor C. H. Christensen, who invited officials of the peninsula counties to confer with railroad executives, representatives of the state railroad and highway commissions and others interested.

Obtaining a water supply far in excess of present needs, purchase by the California-Hawaiian sugar refinery of the Socol wells, three miles south of Napa, was announced recently. Paying a reported price of $55,000 the company acquired the 433-acre ranch on which the three wells are located from Mrs. Mary Pedrotti and her two sons, Sam and Merlin Pedrotti.

The old San Miguel Archangel mission is in imminent danger of a collapse that will destroy its priceless art treasures and decorations as a result of termites eating away unprotected wood, a survey has revealed. For 132 years the beams and supports, bound together with rawhide, have withstood the ravages of time, but under the present condition architectural authorities state, the roof is liable to collapse at any moment. The mission was founded July 25, 1797, by Fr. Firmin Lauson and is now in charge of Fr. Modesto.

Some of the best deer hunting country in Tehama and Plumas counties has been included within the boundaries of game reserve I-G, according to notice of reserve changes received from the division of fish and game commission. Much of the territory recently included adjoins Lassen Volcanic National Park on the south, the southern boundary being the Red Bluff-Susville highway. The west boundary is the old Morgan summit road, while the eastern boundary is Rice Creek and the north fork of the Feather river.

Contracts for two highway projects in Sonoma, Marin and Monterey counties were awarded by B. B. Meek, state director of public works. Hanrahan Brothers of San Francisco, for a price of $536,795, were given the contract to grade and pave twelve miles between Petaluma and Ignacio in Sonoma and Marin counties. This project is part of the Redwood highway, and includes radical betterments of line and grade, eliminating 6 per cent grades and 300-foot radius curves. Unsatisfactory drainage conditions also will be improved. Contract for construction of an undergrade crossing near Spence, Monterey county, was awarded to Triberti & Massaro of Oakland for a price of $24,555.

Two more northern California utility companies must appear before the Railroad commission to answer to charges of excess rates. Commissioner Ezra Decoto will sit at Roseville to conduct an investigation into rates charged by the Roseville Telephone company as the result of statistics compiled by the commission showing earnings during 1928 in excess of 10 per cent. Later he will hold a similar investigation at Modesto on the rates of the Modesto Gas company, also charged with excess profits. More than a dozen California utilities, including the Pacific Gas and Electric company and the Great Western Power company operating in San Francisco, have been cited to appear before the commission to defend rate reduction, proceedings instituted as a result of the commission's investigations of their alleged excess earnings.

A. S. Jones, pharmacist of Chico, presented to Company G, 134th Infantry, a perpetual silver trophy for marksmanship. It will be known as the Dike Jones trophy and will be engraved each year with the name of the guardsman turning in the highest annual score.

The Pathfinder Flying Service, formed to give California "taxi flying" system, have filed articles of incorporation with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, naming Stockton as headquarters. John O. Knox, Dorothy A. Knox and James G. Wrench, all of Stockton, are the directors.

FOOTBALL SEASON
HAS OPENED AGAIN

Great American Intercollegiate Sport Is Here.

Football, that great intercollegiate sport, has come back this fall huskier than ever. Enthusiasm is not lacking in any section according to reports. Practice has started at all major universities, about the same time as in previous years.

When the Big Ten squads reported they were guided by eight men who coached last year. There have been only two radical changes in the coaching staffs. Harry Kipke, one of the greatest backs in Michigan's football history, will direct the Maize and Blue eleven. He succeeds Tad Welman, a former Michigan player who became head coach when Fielding H. Yost decided to devote his time to the athletic directorship.

Aside from the appointments of Kipke as head coach at Michigan and Willaman at Ohio State, the only other important change in coaching staffs of major institutions is at Nebraska. Dana Bible, who learned his football at Carson Newman university and who has coached for years in the South, will be in charge of football at the Cornhusker institution.

The season will be featured by attractive intercollegiate contests. Among these will be Army and Illinois at Champaign on November 9, Harvard at Michigan on the same date; Colgate at Wisconsin October 5; Carnegie Tech at Southern California December 14; Army at Stanford December 28; Notre Dame and Army at New York November 30, and Vanderbilt and Minnesota at Minneapolis October 12. Colgate will clash with Indiana at Bloomington October 19 and Mississippi will come up from the South to play Purdue at Lafayette November 9.

No Change in Rules.

Officials who will handle Western conference football games this fall held their annual meeting at Chicago to reach uniform interpretations of the playing rules.

Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western conference, presided. Several prominent officials talked on the various penalties and the reasons for them. In general, however, all concurred that this year's rules are specific and need little interpretation.

The forward pass was discussed, also the five and fifteen yard penalties. It was agreed that officials signal the score board keeper the reasons for various penalties. The code will be determined by Major Griffith and announced before the first games.

Dana S. Bible, new head football coach at the University of Nebraska and a member of the national football rules committee which last winter made the new regulations ruling a fumbled ball dead at the point of recovery, explained the rule and defended himself and the committee in a meeting at Kansas City.

For the seventh time William T. Tilden II, has won the national singles tennis championship, defeating Francis T. Hunter. The match was played at Forest Hills.

Comiskey to Rebuild.

Charles A. Comiskey, seventy-year-old owner of the White Sox, has informed his associates that he intends to rebuild his team himself. In other words, the veteran baseball magnate will return from his summer home in Eagle River, Wis., shortly and immediately plunge into the business of giving south side fans something to cheer about next season.

Two cueists who made their reputation in the last generation will endeavor to stage a comeback this winter and have announced their intention of entering the world's championship 18-2 balkline tournaments against the younger stars.

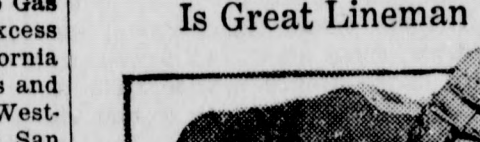

Willie Hoppe, who captured the 18-2 billiard title in 1911 and held it, with the single exception of the year 1921, until the 1924 tournament, will be seen in action again this season.

George Butler Sutton is the other old-timer who will meet the modern exponents of the game this winter.

"The Iron Man" is the most coveted trophy in the American battle fleet. The U. S. S. Tennessee now is in possession of the prize, which is a reward for prowess in all sports.

The New York Giants announced the purchase of the contract of Herman Pruett, left-handed pitcher, from Newark of the International league. Pruett formerly pitched for St. Louis in the American league and Philadelphia in the National. He became noted early in his career with the Browns as a nemesis of Babe Ruth.

Is Great Lineman

Captain Crane of the Illinois grid team is considered one of the best linemen in the Big Ten conference. He is training hard to get into condition.

Nujol works so easily and naturally that it won't upset a baby under any conditions. It keeps everything functioning properly. It not only prevents any excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming but aids in their removal. It is safe and sure. Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York.

Just try Nujol for your baby. Give it to him regularly for the next three months. See if it doesn't make things much easier for both of you. Certainly it could do no harm—for Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. Your druggist carries it. Be sure you get the genuine. Sold only in sealed packages.

THE baby to be envied is the one who is born with an inheritance of perfect health, to begin with.

And who's lucky enough to have a mother who knows how to build up this fortune.

"Perhaps I'm old-fashioned," she'll say to the doctor who pronounces her child physically 100% at a baby show, "but this health certificate means more to me than all the stock certificates in the world. If my baby grows up strong and well, I'm willing to leave it to him to make a career and fortune for himself."

"Already I'm teaching him the value of regular habits. Regular sleep, regular meals, regular functions. He's never once been off schedule, not even when he was cutting teeth or traveling to the country. I make sure of that by giving him Nujol regularly."

Nujol works so easily and naturally that it won't upset a baby under any conditions. It keeps everything functioning properly. It not only prevents any excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming but aids in their removal. It is safe and sure. Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York.

Just try Nujol for your baby. Give it to him regularly for the next three months. See if it doesn't make things much easier for both of you. Certainly it could do no harm—for Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. Your druggist carries it. Be sure you get the genuine. Sold only in sealed packages.

NEW G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

Aside from partisan considerations, the selection of a new party chairman is a matter of interest, hence a good deal of attention is being given to the personality of Claudius H. Huston, recently elected to head the Republican national committee.

Mr. Huston is the son of a Presbyterian minister, who died when Claudius was a boy. The son attended a country school in Indiana, becoming a teacher later at a salary of $30 a month for five months in the year, working on a farm during the remainder of the time.

With a little money he had saved he entered Valparaiso University and worked his way through by "ringing the school bell, waiting on tables, sweeping the dormitory floors and the doctor's office." Leaving the university, he was connected with schools in Chattanooga for a time, then conducted a business college of his own, which brought him into contact with business men of influence, through whom he became identified with important manufacturing enterprises. For several years he has been connected with a number of business and financial corporations and he is quite wealthy.

Mr. Huston was assistant secretary of commerce under Secretary Hoover for nearly two years, and has been active in political life for a long time as a Republican leader.

His rise to wealth and influence is another typical illustration of what an intelligent and energetic American boy can do.

Mr. Ford says he will operate only in a prohibition country. It appears that we have been misinformed concerning England and Germany.

THE OLD TIGER IS 88

Living quietly at his home in La Vendee, where he was born, Georges Clemenceau, "the Tiger of France," 88 years old on September 28, has almost dropped out of sight of the world in which he was one of the most commanding figures only ten years ago.

While his distinguished services as a statesman of France, particularly during the World war, are well known, few perhaps are aware of the fact that he once sought his fortune in the United States.

Educated for the medical profession, he came to New York in 1865, at the age of 24, and became a practicing physician there. Failing in this venture, he devoted himself to teaching, but in this, too, he appears to have met with disappointment. After spending five years in America, he returned to France in 1870, and immediately entered upon a political career, in which he attained world-wide fame, although he met with reverses on several occasions.

He was a born fighter, and it was his determined and brilliant exploits in the political arena which earned for him his title of "The Tiger." He was responsible for the downfall of many French ministries, and in his political battles he neither gave nor asked quarter. He was also editor of periodicals in which his vigorous articles added to his prestige, and he was the author of several books and pamphlets.

Although he has attained his mental vigor, he has taken no part whatever in the political controversies of recent years, a remarkable circumstance in view of his hitherto aggressive nature. Full of years and honors, he calmly awaits the inevitable summons.

HOME COMFORT SOUGHT

One of the significant and encouraging trends of modern life, both urban and rural, is the growing demand for greater comfort in the home. This is indicated by the increasing employment in the household of modern conveniences and labor-saving devices which make for contentment and health.

Engineers and manufacturers are bending their energies to the development of ever better equipment to replace the old symbols of drudgery, such as the broom, the wash-tub and the coal scuttle. Incidentally, the present perfection of oil heating systems promises to cause the coal scuttle, wood box and ash heap to go the way of the horse and buggy. Among the new devices for the home described in a recent article on modern housekeeping is a heater called the disto-stove, so named because it uses distillate from crude oil as fuel, which is claimed to combine convenience, cleanliness and uniformity of temperature at a low cost. This is only one of the numerous first aids to housewives recently developed.

Perhaps the introduction of appliances which make the home more cheerful and comfortable will do more toward preserving our family life than all the preachments of pessimists and reformers.

MORE PORK AND MILK

Some interesting facts concerning the nation's eating habits are contained in an address by O. E. Baker, of the Department of Agriculture, particularly with respect to the large per capita increase in the consumption of pork and milk. During the past twenty-five years the amount of pork eaten per person has increased about 10 per cent, while the consumption of milk has increased 12 per cent. On the other hand, wheat flour has decreased over 20 per cent and corn meal over 60 per cent.

Commenting on this, Mr. Baker notes that among all farm animals the hog and dairy cow produce the most human food per unit of feed consumed, hence the trend of the national appetite toward these products is in the interest of true economy.

A slight increase in the consumption per capita of poultry products has occurred since the war, which places that industry also in a relatively favorable position among the food producing activities of the country.

All of which indicates that the cow, the sow and the hen should be included in every farmer's program of production.

USING FARM WASTE

While many useful products are now made from former farm waste, such as straw, cornstalks, cotton seed, and so on, there is still a wide field for further utilization of such material which is being explored by scientists. It is well known that the by-products of many industrial operations practically represent the profits of the plants. Whenever science enables the farmer to convert his waste material to profitable use, the agricultural situation will doubtless be improved.

In seeking means for doing this the Department of Agriculture is employing capable chemists and other scientists continually. The success which has attended their efforts in recent years gives much promise for an ultimate satisfactory solution of the farm waste problem.

Even Lloyds would hardly take a chance on insuring aviation records against breakage.

EDISON'S FIRST PLANT

Forty-seven years is not such a long time, yet within that period the electrical industry has been built from nothing to its present amazing proportions. It was on September 4, 1882, that Edison's first central station for the generation of electricity was put in operation on Pearl street, New York City.

Recently three models of this first plant have been made for preservation, one going to the Smithsonian Institution, another to Henry Ford's museum in Dearborn, Michigan, and the third to the headquarters of the Edison company.

Compared with the mighty power plants of the present, the old Pearl street station appears almost as a toy affair, but it worked, and was the beginning of an industry which has changed the aspect of the world's industrial and social fabric.

Long confined to the service of the larger cities, electricity gradually spread to the smaller towns, and in recent years has been carried to the rural districts, where it serves hundreds of thousands of farms and country homes.

Rural electrification is still in its infancy, however, and its rapid extension during the coming years will doubtless present another phenomenon as striking as any of the others which have been witnessed since Edison built his first crude plant, forty-seven years ago.

QUEER SUPERSTITIONS

Superstitions regarding the prevention and cure of disease have persisted from time immemorial, many of them being still prevalent in the more backward sections of the country. A few were called to mind by a recent writer, in noting the death of an aged Kentuckian who continued to wear earrings to the last, in the belief that they were good for his eyesight.

Another old-time notion was that wearing a mustache was beneficial to weak eyes, just as it was thought that carrying a buckeye or a potato in the pocket would prevent or cure rheumatism.

One doesn't have to be so very old to remember when children were caused to wear a little bag of the odoriferous asafoetida strung around the neck as a protection against "catching" diseases, and when in many homes bunches of various dried herbs were hung about for the same purpose. Some believed that keeping a goat around the house was a prime health measure.

The writer remembers being warned when a boy not to wade in water when afflicted with hives, lest they "strike to his heart and kill him." He waded, nevertheless, and lives to tell the tale.

These superstitions, like the belief that a horsehair placed in the rain barrel would turn into a snake, are gradually dying out—but many presumably intelligent persons to this day will refuse to take the third light from a match or walk under a ladder, for fear of dire consequences.

Chicago man drank embalming fluid and recovered. Likely as not he'll tackle synthetic gin next.

Complaints are made that the new currency is of poor quality. We also find it poor in quantity.

The fellow who invented yo-yo appears to have made an uncanny estimate of the moron population.

The Desert Moon Mystery

CHAPTER I

The Cannezianos

I knew, that evening in April, when Sam got home from Rattail and came stamping snow into my kitchen, his good old red, white and blue face stretched long and wide in its usual grin, that he had brought some bad news with him.

"I had a letter today," he said, "from the Canneziano twins."

I am like a lot of folks who say that they are not superstitious, who just happen to think that it is bad luck to walk under a ladder. More than likely the shivery, creepy sensation I felt, when Sam said that, was due to the cold he brought in with him, and was not due to the fact that those words of his were the forerunners for all of the grim mysteries and the tragedies that made the Desert Moon ranch, before the end of July, a place of horror.

"How much do they want?" I questioned.

"No, Mary; they want to come here to live. Danielle wrote the letter. She says they want to come here and rest, indefinitely. She says she longs for it with all her soul, or something like that."

"Danielle," I said, "always was the best of the two. You going to let them come, Sam?"

"Anything else for me to do?"

"Not a thing—for you. There'd be plenty of others. Those girls are no kin of yours. Let me see—eight years old when they were here in 1909. Makes them twenty-four years old now, according to my figures. Why a couple of women twins, age grating forty-eight years, should decide to come here and rest their souls, at your expense, is beyond me."

"I have plenty."

"So has Henry Ford. Why don't they go rest their souls with him? They've got as much claim on him as they have on you. None. Leave those girls rest their souls right there where they are, Sam."

"No—I don't know, Mary. I guess I'll write them a letter and tell them to come along. Lots of room."

I didn't argue any more about it. For twenty-five years I had been housekeeper of the Desert Moon ranchhouse, and I had learned, during that time, that there was only one subject, concerning Sam, or the place, on which I could never hope to have any say-so. Trying to argue with Sam about anything that had to do, in any way, with Margarita Ditsie, when she was Margarita Ditsie Stanley, or when she was Margarita Ditsie Canneziano, was about as sensible as hoisting a chiffon parasol for protection in the midst of one of our Nevada mountain cloudbursts.

Margarita Ditsie was of French-Canadian parentage; a dark-haired, big-eyed beauty. Her father kept a gambling hole in Esmeralda county in the early days. Her mother had run away from a convent, after she had become a nun, to marry him. The girl had some of the nun, some of the runaway, and some of the gambling house proprietor in her. It made a queer combination.

When she was eighteen years old she came from Carson to visit Lily Trooper, over on the Three Bars ranch, about sixty miles from here. Sam met her there. She and Sam were married two weeks later. She was a lot younger than Sam; but, even then, he was the richest man in the valley, with every unwedded woman for a hundred miles around setting her cap for him.

Whether Margarita married him for his wealth, or whether it was to spite the other girls who would have liked to marry him, I don't know. All I know is that Margarita never had a mite of love for him. She stayed with him, though, and acted decently enough for two years, until Dan Canneziano came to the ranch and got a job on it as a cowpuncher.

It was during those two years that Sam built this ranchhouse for her. Sam's lead and silver mine had just come in, and there was nothing, from Italian marble fireplaces to teakwood floors, that was too grand for what Margarita called the Stanley mansion. She left it, all the elegance and the luxury, and she broke her marriage vows, for love of this cowpuncher. That, I guess, is fair and full enough description of Margarita Canneziano.

I don't blame her. I quit blaming folks for things a good many years ago when, after firing three Chinese cooks in six weeks, I decided that, if we were to live healthily and wholesomely, I'd have to take over the job of cooking as well as housekeeping for the Desert Moon ranch, and set about it, and learned to cook. In other words, when I became a creator myself, I got to know creations and so quit blaming all of them.

If I forget to put the soda in the sour milk pancakes, it isn't their fault if they don't rise. They are as I made them. Margarita was as the Lord made her. He, I suppose, either had his own good reasons for turning out such a mess, or else He was tired, or flustered, or maybe, was just experimenting on the road to something better when He did it.

I should explain, I suppose, wishing to be as honest as possible in spite of the fact that I am writing a mystery story, that Canneziano had a good education; he talked poetry, and played the violin. Margarita heard him playing, down in the outfit's quarters one day, and had Sam invite him up to the house to play. She accompanied him on the grand piano that Sam had bought for her.

Before long, Dan Canneziano was spending a good part of his time at the ranchhouse. Sam, being nobody's fool, soon saw how the land lay; but he, according to his custom then and now, kept his mouth shut and his eyes open. Sure enough, one evening they tried to elope together. Sam went after them and brought them back. The three of them had about half an hour's talk together. Then Sam herded Canneziano down to the outfit's quarters and, I suppose, told the men to keep him there, for there he stayed until Sam was ready for him again.

The next morning Sam started to the county seat. He reached there that evening. The following morning he got his divorce. He came back to the Desert Moon on the third morning, with his divorce and with a preacher. He sent for Canneziano, and stood by while the preacher married Margarita Stanley to Daniel Canneziano, decent and regular, according to the laws of Nevada.

There it should have ended. It didn't, because Sam never got over loving Margarita. So when, nine years later, she came back to the Desert Moon, with twin girls, Danielle and Gabrielle, and said that Canneziano had deserted her and the children Sam took them all right in. I don't know, yet, whether or not they took him in.

Certainly he did not show much surprise when, in about ten days, Canneziano put in an appearance. Sam allowed him to get a good start with his threats, and then he took him across his knees and gave him a sound spanking, and passed him over to Margarita to dry his tears, and washed his own hands and went fishing.

That evening he had one of the men hitch up, and take the whole kit and caboodle of Cannezianos to Rattail in time to catch the east-bound train. I am ashamed to say that Sam gave them money. I don't know how much. A tidy sum, I'll be bound, for shortly after we heard that Canneziano had opened the finest gambling house south of the Mason and Dixon line, in New Orleans.

Sam wanted to keep the children. He offered to adopt them. Margarita would not consider it.

When Margarita died, in France, seven years after she had paid us her blackmailing visit, Sam, the nifty, wrote to Canneziano and again offered to adopt the girls and give them a good home on the Desert Moon. He got a few insulting, insinuating lines for an answer. Canneziano had his own plans for his daughters, who had developed into rare beauties.

But, if Sam was soft with the women, he was not soft with Canneziano. He had showed up here, beaming and broke, about three years ago. He had left, suddenly, after having seen Sam and no one else, less beaming but quite as broke as he had been when he had come. I thought, maybe, Sam was forgetting that side of the family, and that this might be a good time to remind him.

"Is Canneziano planning to come on later, too, and rest?" I asked.

"Just at present he is in San Quentin, serving a three years' term. Danielle didn't say for what devilry. His term's up this summer. Poor little girls," Sam went on, "I reckon we haven't any idea of what they've been through, all these years."

"I reckon not," I agreed. "But they aren't little girls any more. Seems queer to me, with all the beauty their father was bragging about, that neither of them has married. Twenty-four is getting along."

"I'll bet," Sam answered, "it is because they have never had any decent opportunities. Considering the life that they've had to lead, and all, I think it speaks pretty well for them that they have come through straight and clean."

Instead of asking him how he knew that, I said, "You'd be willing, then, to have John marry one of them?"

John, Sam's adopted son, was the apple of Sam's eye. He would have the ranch, and Sam's fortune, other dependents provided for, when Sam died. Whether or not the girl he married would be contented to live on the ranch, and help John carry it on and keep up its traditions, making it one of the proudest spots in Nevada, was a mighty important thing to Sam.

He waited so long before answering my question that I was sure I had hit the nail on the head.

"John," he finally said, "is old enough to take care of himself."

With that he turned and went out of my kitchen, not giving me a chance to say that, though I had lived through fifty-six years, I had never yet seen a man at the age he had just mentioned. I knew that if these Canneziano girls came to the Desert Moon, they would bring trouble with them. I was right. A merciful Providence be thanked that, for a time at least, the knowledge of how terribly right I was, was spared me.

I am not an admirer of men. Looking at most any man, I find myself thinking what a pity it was he had to grow up, since as a little, helpless child he would have made a complete success.

Sam Stanley is different. There is some of the child left in Sam, just as there is, I think, in any good man or woman—a little seasoning of simplicity, really, is all it amounts to—but there is a quality about Sam that makes a person feel that he set out, early in life, to follow the recipe for being a man, and that he has made a thorough job of it.

Why he, as a young man, with a pretty fair education and a tidy sum of money left him by his father, who had been a well-thought-of lawyer in Massachusetts, should come out here to Nevada, take up his homestead land, and settle content for the rest of his life, has always been more or less of a mystery to me, unless you take Sam's explanation of it.

He says that, when his father died, it left him without a relative, whom he knew of, in the world. He was twenty years old, and he owned a set of roving toes and an imagination. So he went to California, seeking romance and gold. Finding neither, he came down here to Nevada.

He staked out his hundred and sixty acres with Boulder creek tumbling and roaring through them. He built his cabin. He hired help, and built fences, and dug ditches, and planted crops, and bought stock. He bought more land. He hired more help, dug more ditches, planted bigger crops, bought more stock. He has been doing that regularly ever since. And, of course, he located the lead and silver mine, on his property, that made him millions if it made him a cent, before it played out. But, in spite of the money that "Old Lady Luck," as he called his mine, made for him, Sam never gave his heart to it. It was the Desert Moon ranch that he loved, and the money he made from it that he was proud of. That was why, when the honor of the ranch went under, during those terrible weeks last summer, Sam all but went under with it.

After Margarita left the place from her visit of 1909, taking the twins with her, Sam went around for a week or two, with his head cocked to one side as if he was listening for something. I knew what he was missing, and I was not surprised when, one day, he told me he had decided to send to San Francisco and get a couple of children and adopt them.

Phrase "Stone Age" Not Literal in Application

The Stone age is a term commonly used to denote the earliest recognized stage in the development of human culture as defined by the materials used by man for weapons, utensils, etc. The phrase is somewhat misleading, since it is probable that primitive man made use of wood and other perishable materials to a far greater extent than of stone, and consequently the stage is defined by the prevailing material of the relics, not by that of actual implements in common use. The term "Stone age" represents in no sense a chronological division of human progress, but is a loose equivalent for a stage of cultural development varying widely in duration in different parts of the world. There are, e. g., tribes still in the Stone age, while, on the other hand, some groups had out-

Recipe for a Perfect Day

A day is just as perfect as you want to make it. Helen Christine Bennett gives a perfect day decalogue in an article for the Physical Culture Magazine.

She writes: "1. I wake up. Stretch. 2. Get a cheerful frame of mind. 3. Drink a glass of cool water. 4. Take ten minutes setting-up exercises. 5. Take a shower—warm, then cool. 6. Don't eat too much breakfast. 7. Refuse to rush. 8. Walk part way to work. 9. Don't worry while in your office. 10. Rest before your dinner and don't work evenings."

He wrote to a big hospital in San Francisco and got in touch with a trained nurse who would be willing to come up and live on the ranch and take care of the two children. He had her go to an orphan's home and select the children and bring them with her when she came.

The nurse came early in September with two brown-eyed children named Vera and Alvin. Sam at once re-named them. John, he said, was the only name for a boy, and Mary the only name for a girl. But since my name was Mary, he would let the little girl have Martha, which meant, according to Sam, "Boss of the Ranch."

The nurse's name was Mrs. Ollie Ricker. I don't know how old she was then. I don't know how old she is now. She never talked. I do not mean that she never chatted, or gossiped. I mean that she never said one word if she could possibly avoid it. At the end of sixteen years of daily association with Mrs. Ricker, that is, up to the time of the second murder on the Desert Moon, I knew exactly as much about her past life as you know at this minute.

John, at that time, was nine years old. He was as bright, and as up-standing, and as handsome, as any little fellow to be found anywhere. I may as well say, now, that this description of John, at nine years old, is as good a description as I can give of John at twenty-five, if you will draw his height up to six feet, and put on weight accordingly.

The papers from the orphanage gave Martha's age as five years; but even I, who knew less about children than it was decent for any woman to know, soon saw that something was wrong. She walked well enough, but she could scarcely talk at all. Her ways and her habits were those of a two-year-old infant, yet she was far too large for that age. Before she had been with us a week I knew that Martha was not quite right in her mind.

Mrs. Ricker knew it, too. Her excuse was, that she had chosen Martha because she was so pretty; that she had had no opportunity to judge her other characteristics. She insisted that she thought, with proper care, Martha would develop normally.

I knew better. Sam knew it, too. But, when I begged and besought him not to adopt her, he brought out an argument good and conclusive for him.

"If I don't adopt her, and take care of her," said Sam, "who the heck would?"

So adopt her he did. And he spent a small fortune on doctors, specialists, for her. None of them could do anything. It was, they said, a hopeless case of retarded development. So, at twenty-one years of age, Martha, though the care and doctoring had given her a fine healthy body, had the mind of a child of five or six years—not too bright a child, either. That was at best. At worst—Well, no matter. Entirely harmless, the doctors said; but I always had my doubts.

CHAPTER II

Arrivals at the Ranch

It was three years after Mrs. Ricker came to the ranch, bringing John and Martha, that Hubert Hand put in his appearance. He had got Mr. Indian Chat Chin, as everybody called him, to bring him up from Rattail in his old surrey.

Mr. Indian Chat Chin stopped his old nag at the entrance to the driveway, and Hubert Hand climbed carefully down and came up the road, swinging a walking cane like he was leading a parade.

Sam and I, as was our custom, went walking down to meet him.

He took off his hat to me, and said to Sam, "I wish to see the owner of this ranch."

"Nobody ever mistook me for a fairy before," Sam said. "But go ahead. Your first wish is granted. What are the other two?"

Hubert Hand got out his card then. Besides his name it had "Clover-blossom Creamery," and the San Francisco address printed on it.

Hubert Hand explained that he had an up-and-coming creamery business in San Francisco, but that his physician had told him that he had to live in a high, dry climate with plenty of sunshine and no fog. He had, after inquiries and investigations, decided that the Desert Moon ranch, altitude seven thousand feet, sunshine three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, to say nothing of the marvelous view of the Garret mountains, the hunting, the fishing, and the pure snow water, would fill all his requirements.

His proposition was that he start a creamery, on the Desert Moon ranch, and supply the valley with ice cream, butter, and other dairy products. Sam had the ranch, the cows, the big ice plant. Mr. Hubert Hand had the knowledge and the equipment. They could divide the profits.

Next to sleep men, I guess there is nothing that cow men hold in lower contempt than they hold dairy farms. Sam was too much disgusted to swear very long.

"Listen, stranger," he said. "I wouldn't turn the Desert Moon into a place to slop milk around in if the entire valley had to depend on Hong-kong, China, for its ice cream cones. Forget it, and come in now and have some supper."

To my knowledge, Hubert Hand, from that day to this, has never again mentioned, on the Desert Moon, anything that had to do with creameries. Neither, from that day to this, has he been off the ranch for more than a couple of weeks at a time.

"By the way," he began, trying to make it sound unimportant, when we had finished supper, "I heard, in Felo, that you were something of a chess player."

"I am, when I can get a game," Sam said. "But chess players, in these parts, are as scarce as hen's teeth."

"I play a little," Hubert Hand produced, right modestly.

Sam jumped up and got out his chess table.

Hubert Hand beat him the first game in about half an hour. They set up their men again. It took Hubert Hand over an hour that time to beat Sam, but he did it.

"Heck!" Sam said, at the end of that game. "You're hired."

"Hired for what?"

"For whatever you want to call it, except the slopping of milk around. Send for your trunk and name your pay. Why didn't you say, in the first place, that you were a blankety blank crack chess player?"

Hubert Hand accepted Sam's offer, then and there. The next day he titled himself assistant ranch manager, and named his salary at two hundred and fifty dollars a month. Sam paid it without blinking; and kept right on managing the ranch, and everything on it, except, perhaps, myself, without any assistance, the same as he had always done.

Chadwick (Anfield, the other member of our household, who was present on the Desert Moon ranch at the time of the first murder, came only two years ago last October.

He was wearing white corduroy trousers, a long yellow rubber raincoat, and a straw hat tethered to its buttonhole with a string. He was carrying a ukulele under his arm and a camera in his hand. He took off his hat, displaying a head full of pretty yellow curls. He smiled, displaying a sweet, gentle disposition. (If there is any better index to character than the way a person smiles, I have never found it.)

"How do you do?" he said. "I have come to visit you."

By the time Sam got his pipe picked up, John had got down the forty-foot length of living room and had Chad by both hands, and was introducing him as the friend he had told us about, the friend he had made at Mother's field, during the war.

The way of that was, John had saved his life for him down there, and had never since been able to get out from under the responsibility of it. John had found a job for him, after the armistice, and when Chad lost it, John had loaned him money to start out in a vaudeville act. He did fine with that for three years, and was making good money, when he got into an automobile accident in Kansas City and was laid up for months in the hospital there. John had wired money to him, and had asked him to come for a visit to the Desert Moon. But, since he had had a standing invitation for years, and since he had sent no word that he was coming, John was as much surprised as any of us that evening.

Chad was a little, pindling fellow. Around Sam and John and Hubert Hand he looked about as fainty and trifling as the garnish around the platter of the Thanksgiving turkey. He seemed kind of like that, too; like the extra bit of garnishing that makes life's platter prettier and nicer—absolutely useless, maybe, but ne-er cluttery.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach.

It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

"Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, 'California' so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years."

DALY CITY RECORD

PAULINE FREDERICK WILL APPEAR AT THE CURRAN

Pauline Frederick, who has endeared herself to screen and stage devotees in this country and abroad, will appear at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a limited engagement beginning Monday, October 7, in what promises to be one of the most noteworthy and delightful stage vehicles of her career. The play, termed a unique comedy-drama, is from the pen of that distinguished and popular English playwright, Noel Coward, and is entitled "The Queen was in the Parlor."

While the Coward opus was having a great vogue in England, Miss Frederick was fulfilling a London engagement, and she was so fascinated by its unusual appeal and the scope the stellar role would give to her own talents that she brought the manuscript to America. Ever since she has been awaiting an opportunity to present it first in California rather than in New York. The local performances mark the first performances in this country.

The play is said to sparkle with the wit and smart repartee which is considered characteristic of Coward's works, some of which have been termed "shocking" and "daring"—"Easy Virtue," "Fallen Angels" and "The Vortex."

"The Queen was in the Parlor" has a Queen with a past. Nyda, kin to a Continental royal family, finds herself footloose in Paris, where, after many amatory adventures, she falls genuinely in love with a young Frenchman. On the very eve of their marriage she is unexpectedly recalled to her country to reign as Queen, and enter into a political marriage with a Prince of the realm. A revolution, an attempted assassination and the events following the clandestine resumption of the romance between the Queen and her lover of the gay Paris days are some of the dramatic headlines of the story.

Miss Frederick is being presented by Belasco and Curran, and the piece is staged by Gilmore Brown.

"KIBITZER" TO BE PRESENTED AT THE GEARY THEATRE

The announcement sent out this week from the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, that the New York stage success "Kibitzer," will open at that theatre on Sunday, October 6, provides San Francisco theatregoers with an anticipated treat. The play, one of the truly outstanding comedy successes of the last Broadway season, is the work of Jo Swerling and Edward G. Robinson, the latter an actor seen here in "The Racket."

"Kibitzer," if you do not really know, is the term applied to one who presumes to know it all and who constantly intrudes in the affairs of others. In this case the "Kibitzer" is the owner of a cigar store in lower New York, with a penchant for manipulations in Wall street stocks. His constant advice to others on all matters provide the hilarious moments of the play, through running all through the play is a fien note of human pathos combined at times with a melodramatic touch.

Gregory Ratoff, the famous international star, is the lead and featured player of the splendid cast. Ratoff was for a long time with Max Reinhardt in Germany, and was at one time the foremost comedian of the Moscow Art Theatre in Russia, where he has played with Baclonova and others, now all well known on the American stage and screen. He came to this country in 1922 with a Russian troupe, and after it dissolved he remained to play featured parts in "Blossom Time," "Castles in the Air" and scored a decided success in "Tenth Avenue."

If the term "Kibitzer" is not known generally in San Francisco, the play will serve to popularize it, for it can be applied generally to those particularly who dabble in other's affairs and to those now known as "know it alls."

A motor car that requires no driver has been invented, according to an English paper. But there should at least be a dual control for occupants of the back seat.

SOMETHING NEW

Tests are being made with a French army tank propelled by a Diesel engine.

Landing wheels for one of the world's largest airplanes will have tires more than seven feet high, with casings 16 inches in diameter.

A new all-silk parachute for aviators weighs only eight pounds for the ordinary type.

Said to be the world's longest locomotive, a monster 119 feet long and weighing approximately two million pounds has been built for the Great Northern railroad.

Bricks which are fireproof and waterproof are being made in Serbia of a composition using paper as the base.

A new trunk rack has been devised which slides under the body of an automobile when not in use.

Natural red dye has been produced from a species of cactus by a German chemist.

An automatic fire escape wound on a reel has been successfully tested in England.

Ingredients used in the manufacture of cosmetics, flavoring extracts and perfume are now derived from apricot pits, which were formerly burned as waste material.

A Swiss inventor claims to have designed a boat which will skim the surface of the water at a speed of more than 200 miles an hour.

An automatic lighthouse to be installed on the California coast is said to be capable of burning a year without attention.

Experiments are being made with a new anesthetic which may be injected into the veins, and which is said to have many advantages over present methods.

A new gem cutting machine invented in Australia requires little experience on the part of the operator.

By means of a newly invented glue, shoe soles and uppers may be securely fastened together at high speed without the use of nails.

The first arc-welded bridge in the world has been successfully constructed across the Slutvia river in Poland.

Smoke smudges are used in Japan to protect tender mulberry leaves, which feed silkworms, from frost.

Good progress is being made in the development of a process for making wood fire-proof.

A new English watch has neither hands nor dial, the hours and minutes being shown similarly to the record of miles and fractions on an automobile speedometer.

Aluminum street cars, only one-half as heavy as steel ones, have been introduced in Pittsburgh.

Remarkable demonstrations of the new autogyro airplane, which rises from the ground and descends vertically, were made at the recent Cleveland air races.

Poison of certain snakes has been used to manufacture a drug useful in treating heart irregularities.

Air liners driven by steam and carrying hundreds of passengers are predicted by French engineers.

In England waste vegetable material has been converted into artificial wool, suitable for the manufacture of blankets and other heavy fabrics.

A combination refrigerator and furnace, to cool houses in summer and heat them in winter, is being developed.

A new airplane thermometer automatically records the temperature of the air through which the plane passes.

Recent experiments indicate that cement may soon be produced as a by-product of fertilizer manufacture.

Heavy steel shoes, padded for comfort, have been made in Germany for prisoners' wear to prevent escapes.

Soft, pliable leather may be made from the lining of the mouth of whales.

A new box meter for measuring X-rays gives greater control in their use and consequently greater safety.

At Ranger, Tex., wheat was reaped, threshed, ground into flour and baked into biscuits in 17 minutes and 3 seconds.

English scientists have developed a new secret alloy of great hardness, which no drill has been capable of piercing. The metal is stainless, not affected by water, and sea parasites will not stick to it.

THE WISE-CRACKER

Now comes the complaint that the new currency fades. Our experience is that the old faded away at an alarming rate too.

One Alabama newspaper puts it this way: "If you like our paper, tell the world; if you don't like it, keep your mouth shut."

Lottie Pickford seems to want her name embalmed in history. Her third husband is an undertaker.

Our admiration for King Alfonso is increased upon learning that he likes to dip cookies in his coffee and is courageous enough to do so in company.

"Says Churches Need Power"—Headline. And possibly the "power trust" will gobble up all the religion next.

It would be terrible if the plan to put the postal service on a paying basis were to deprive us of our postage-free Congressional Record.

A new cooling system installed in the Senate chamber in Washington is as effective as the melting of 175 tons of ice daily. This should condense quite a lot of hot air.

The Los Angeles district attorney has ruled that dry agents must remove their hats when entering private homes.

Some ladies will doubtless be satisfied if the pajama fad shall cause their husbands to adopt them for night wear.

Harvard University received $13,500,000 in gifts during the last academic year, of which $5,400,000 was from Edward S. Harkness of New York.

RESTRICTIVE IMMIGRATION

"We owe to restrictive immigration more than to any other one thing, the present prosperity and economic stability of the country," stated Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, in an address on August 28, before the annual State Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, at Pittsburgh, Pa. "The position," he continued, "we have attained in industrial and business development is now the envy of the rest of the world. I will not say it is due wholly to restrictive immigration, but I will say this—that without our new immigration policy, no other effort that our best business genius could make would have given us this prosperity. Without restricted immigration, everything else would have failed. Without it, no constructive measure could even have gotten a start. For without restriction to immigration and with great tides of aliens coming to us throughout every year, we should have witnessed an appalling competition for jobs. Millions would have been permanently idle, and even those who were employed would have been subject to staggering cuts in wages. Two men would have been bidding for every job, each underbidding the other, and wages would have sunk to the bottom level. I need hardly say that with this collapse in wages would have gone a collapse of our present standard of living. And business itself would have been disastrously affected; for the greater buyers in our market—our millions of wage earners—would not have had any approach to their present purchasing power."

"That is what restrictive immigration has done for us all. Many of the countries from whom our new citizens comes still think we passed this legislation with a preference for certain races. Even here at home certain critics hold that view. They are all mistaken. Restrictive immigration had just one motive behind it, and that a strictly economic reason. It was passed for the economic salvation of America—an end which it has triumphantly attained."

MONTE BLUE IN "SKIN DEEP" AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

Monte Blue portrays a scarred and sinister leader of a group of gangsters in "Skin Deep," the new attraction at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. It is a novel characterization for the popular actor and it is impossible to recognize the good natured Monte in the early stages of the story.

Plastic surgery plays an important part in the Blue characterization. It is a suggestion of Lon Chaney really. In the first part of the film Monte is the repulsive criminal, a horrible figure. In the latter part of the film he undergoes a complete facial change and he appears as the Monte Blue as everyone knows him.

While "Skin Deep" is a story of the underworld and criminals, it is not sordid. In fact there is a wealth of comedy and spectacular background. Then there is the pleasing factor of the man who comes back, combined with a ripping good love story.

The Kaiser's brother-in-law is a waiter in Luxembourg, while Wilhelm is waiting at Doorn.

An automatic concertina player has been invented, but no one seems to know why.

Cook, next Tuesday evening, October 8, at 8 o'clock. An interesting program will be given, after which refreshments will be served. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Dormoy, of Mission Circle, entertained a large gathering of friends at their home last Saturday evening in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The bride and groom of twenty-five years ago received many gifts, among them a beautiful cake from the Langendorf Baking Company, where Mr. Dormoy is employed.

CLAM DIGGER, CAUGHT IN THE MUD, DROWNED

Trapped by a rising tide near South San Francisco while his hands and feet were held firmly in a mud shoal where he had been digging clams, John Chiari, aged 51, of 209 Linden avenue, South San Francisco, was drowned late Friday of last week. Chiari's body, with legs buried to the knees in the sticky mud, was recovered by Police Chief Louis Belloni, South San Francisco, whose attention was attracted by a "strange looking object" about 75 feet off shore near Sierra Point.

The strange object proved to be the back of the dead man, clad in a light colored shirt. His coat and hat were found on the bank. Belloni risked his life in the investigation, sinking farther and farther into the mud as he attempted to extricate the body.

The water was four feet deep where the body was recovered.

OFFICERS WILL WAR ON GLARING LIGHTS

A statewide educational and traffic enforcement campaign, to be conducted in co-operation with the California Committee of Public Safety, has been launched by Eugene W. Biscailuz, Superintendent of the California Highway Patrol.

Aroused by the menace of glaring lights on the highways, Biscailuz announced the first fifteen days of October would be devoted to educating the driving public in the necessity of eliminating illegal and dangerous lights.

This, Biscailuz said, will be a "warning and educational period." Actual enforcement of headlight provisions of the law will follow this period of education.

"The new California Highway Patrol does not intend to harass the motorist but rather to be his friend," said the superintendent. "For this reason we have set aside this fifteen-day period strictly for the purpose of educating the motorist. During this period, our officers will instruct the public, stopping motorists driving with glaring lights, informing them of the law and how to have their lights adjusted."

"After this period has expired, however, we intend to enforce the law rigidly and will require motorists with glaring headlights to have them adjusted at once in compliance with the terms of the new law. Glaring headlights constitute one of the greatest evils on the highways."

"Other phases of law enforcement will follow the headlight drive, as a part of the general campaign," Biscailuz said.

DALY CITY THEATRE'S TRIPLE ATTRACTION

There is a triple attraction bill at the Daly City Theatre tomorrow, headed by Hoot Gibson in a first run special, "The Lariat Kid," a hard-riding, thrilling Western story. That funny comedy star of "What Price Glory," Sammy Cohen, will be seen in "Homesick," a screamingly funny comedy. Episode one of the new serial, "Fighting for Fame," will be shown. There will be free candy for the kiddies at the matinee.

For Sunday, Snooky White and his players will present a screamingly funny comedy musical playlet on the stage, while Victor McLaglen will be seen as the feature screen attraction in "Strong Boy." Episode two of the serial "Fighting for Fame" will also be shown.

Monday night is Silver nite, and will bring to the screen Marie Prevost, Alan Hale and Bobby Bruns in "The Shady Lady."

Pauline Frederick, with Lois Wilson and Bert Lytell, will be the Tuesday attraction, when they will be seen in Warner Brothers' big first run special, "On Trial."

There will be a big double bill on Wednesday, with Lois Moran and George O'Brien in "True Heaven," and Tom Tyler in "Idaho Red."

For Thursday, Irene Rich will hold the top spot in "Women They Talk About."

Sam and his Country Store, together with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in "Two Weeks Off," will make up Friday's bill.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard
VOLUME 3 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1929 NUMBER 10

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"How much are yer fish, Mr. Goldstein?" "They're 8 cents a pound, Mrs. O'Brien."

"I'll take two of them. How much will they be?" "Let's see. Eight pounds—eight times eight are eighty-four. Take them for seventy-five cents, Mrs. O'Brien."

"Thank ye, Mr. Goldstein, I'll do that. Ye're always good to the Irish, I'll say that fer ye."

Winter is approaching. Let us replenish your coal bin—before the cold snap arrives.

The Pretty Nurse: "Every time I take the patient's pulse, it gets faster. What shall I do?" Doctor: "Blindfold him."

Rastus: "What's the matter, Mose? You look so mad." Mose: "Who wouldn't be? Dat Doctah what operated on me sewed me up with white thread."

"Who is that man in the blue coat?" "He's the umpire, darling."

"And why does he have that funny wire thing on his face?" "To keep him from biting the players."

"Lot's wife, who looked back and turned into a pillar of salt, has nothing on my wife. She looked back and turned into a telegraph pole."

"How is your new house coming on?" "Splendidly. We've got the roof and the mortgage both on."
